BuilderMT, the nation's acknowledged leader in production management software for residential homebuilders, today announced that its President, Tom Gebes, was just honored as a finalist in the Ernst & Young LLP's "Entrepreneur of the Year 2006" competition for the Rocky Mountain region.

Gebes was one of only 22 people in the final round, and one of three in the "Software" category. A panel of independent judges and past winners chose members of this elite group based on "demonstrated excellence and extraordinary success in such areas as innovation, financial performance, and personal commitment to their businesses and communities." Gebes joined such notable company leaders as Bill Chambers and John Spiers, Lefthand Networks, and the founder of MapQuest and Local Matters, Perry Evans. Past winners of the Entrepreneur of the Year award have been the founders of Home Depot, Amazon.com, Starbucks, Google, and eBay.

Ernst & Young Entrepreneur of the Year is the world's most prestigious business award for entrepreneurs. Recognized globally, the award provides a unique way of encouraging entrepreneurial activity and recognizing the contribution of outstanding men and women who inspire others with their vision, leadership and achievement. As the first and only truly global award of its kind, Ernst & Young Entrepreneur of the Year celebrates those who are building and leading successful, growing, and dynamic business, recognizing them through regional, national, and global awards programs in over 115 cities and more than 30 countries.

"I know it is a cliché to say that being a finalist was an award in itself, but it's true. I was honored to be included in this elite group," said Tom Gebes, President of BuilderMT. "Being named as a finalist is testament to the remarkable accomplishments of the team at BuilderMT. I'm proud to have been honored, and I congratulate our company members, business partners, strategic partners, and clients for their support in bringing us such notoriety and success."
